FOND MEMORIES of the days they spent in the one-room Fern Chapel School spurred on the dedicated volunteers of Ferguson Flats, who have made great strides in restoring the structure.

■ Up Front

Restoration of pioneer school a labor of love

It's been a challenging year, but a very progressive one, for the dedicated band of former students and other volunteers hard at work on the restoration of Fern Chapel School in the Ferguson Flats district.

In the thirteen months since the Alberta Historical Resources Foundation recognized the school, on its original site, as historically significant and approved a grant to assist with restoration, the 1913 pioneer structure has taken on a whole new look, going from a decaying derelict to a handsome example of the one-room schools which once dotted Alberta.

The crumbling rock and cement foundation had to be completely replaced, which meant jacking up the building, one side at a time, collecting rocks from neighboring fields, and mixing cement in a wooden trough with a hoe, much as it would have been done when the school was built almost 90 years ago.

Removal of the age-silvered wooden drop siding revealed that the bottom logs and two logs above the west windows were showing serious signs of rot. New logs were squared to match the originals and treated with preservative before being hoisted into place. The squared logs had stood the test of time quite well, but needed realignment. Celebrate Grandparents Day with seniors' fundraiser

The Alberta Council on Aging (ACA) is recognizing Grandparents Day, September 8, with a special appeal to seniors to join their walk of celebration and solidarity. Elk Point's nine-block walk will start at 2 p.m. at the Elk Point Seniors' Recreation Centre and walkers will return there for cake, coffee and a program honoring grandparents.

The walk has two focuses: first, to recognize the wisdom and valuable attributes of grandparents on Grandparents Day, and secondly, as a fundraiser for the ACA. Seniors, grandparents and those supporting seniors are invited to sponsor a walker or to collect pledges of support for the ACA and take part in the walk. Pledge forms can be picked up at the FCSS office, Apple Drugs and Home Town Grocers.

Seniors in Alberta are saying "enough is enough" as program and health care cuts cause untold hardships for many low income seniors. The walk is aimed at raising funds to support the only province-wide organization of seniors, which is also the only provincial seniors organization in Canada. The Alberta Council on Aging represents nearly 50,000 seniors in Alberta through individual and group memberships. Through ACA's Senior Friendly Program™ and a regional network, the organization seeks to maintain or improve the quality of life for seniors.

The Council is a registered charity involved in numerous programs and services for seniors. The ACA advocates on behalf of seniors by request from the Alberta Minister of Seniors and meets with his department on a regular basis. Tax receipts will be issued for pledges of $10 or more.

Problems plague third party review – LRHA

By Todd MacKay

Staff Writer

The Lakeland Regional Health Authority (LRHA) got to roll the dice on its deficit budget a second time after the health minister appointed an accounting firm to do a third party review of the situation. But after an Aug. 28 board meeting, the LRHA raised concerns that the rules of the game have been changed.

LRHA officials met with accounting firm Deloitte and Touche Aug. 29 to discuss their concerns.

"It went quite well," said LRHA chair Ernie Isley. "Although Deloitte and Touche doesn't have the mandate we thought they were going to have from the minister's letter."

LRHA members were encouraged after Alberta Health and Wellness Minister Mar visited Lakeland and announced a third party review of the provincial funding formula's application to LRHA. He also said the review would examine the "reasonableness" of revenue projections in LRHA's proposed business plan.

"This opens the doors of opportunity," said St. Paul board member John Pilipchuk at the board meeting.

"It's like a dream. It seems every time we've reached for the cookie jar in the past we've had our hands slapped. I'm positive we'll get the extra funding. It'll be a great thing for the present and the future."

Subsequent communication with Alberta Health and Wellness deflated some of the LRHA's enthusiasm, however.

"There was no indication of a right to appeal," said the LRHA's chief administrator Pearl Babiuk, referring to a meeting with Alberta Health and Wellness. "There's no (provisions for LRHA) presentations. Most of the information is to come from the province."

The LRHA's inability to have meaningful input into the review caused board members to question its value.

"We're not being given the opportunity to present our case," said Cold Lake board member Allen Buck. "This is just consultant number two."

"How independent is the review if all the information comes through one place," said Fort Saskatchewan board member Margaret Wade.

The board chair echoed that objection.

"We're comfortable with the assignment given to Deloitte and Touche, but not with the restrictive way they're expected to carry it out in that information would be provided by Alberta Health and Wellness and they (Deloitte and Touche) would consult with the LRHA but only as needed," said Isley. "Now that is not my concept of a third party appeal panel."

In a letter to the health minister, Isley argued that a third party review should meet with both sides and have an opportunity to ask questions before rendering a decision.

Isley also told the board he would ask to have the reports written by consultant Jim Saunders and Deloitte and Touche made public.

The board raised further questions about the review when Babiuk explained some of the history between Deloitte and Touche and the LRHA. Deloitte and Touche were the LRHA's auditors shortly after regionalization, but were unsuccessful keeping that position.

Buck characterized the relationship between Deloitte and Touche and the LRHA saying it "has been difficult in the past."

After meeting with the accounting firm, Isley said he has no concerns about the firm's objectivity.

Lakeland loses 21 health jobs

The Lakeland Regional Health Authority (LRHA) board heard some of the first consequences of the cuts they've had to make at their meeting on Aug. 29.

Specific positions and departments are still unavailable as some employees are still on vacation or leave and haven't been personally notified, said chief administrator Pearl Babiuk.

The communities affected have been released, however.

Lamont lost one job, Vegreville lost five, Elk Point lost one, St. Paul lost two, Bonnyville lost four, Cold Lake lost three, Lac La Biche lost four, and Fort Saskatchewan lost one, for a total of 21 positions thus far.

Start school with a healthy lunch

It's "Back to School" time and time to plan for school lunches. Those leisurely days of summer holidays are over and it's back to the busy schedule of fall.

Research shows that well-nourished students learn and function better. "Good nutrition enhances a child's ability to learn. A good lunch is the key to remaining energetic and being able to concentrate at school in the afternoon. The bottom line seems to be that children are happier, healthier and more productive when they eat well," says Charlotte Varem-Sanders, Community Nutritionist with the Lakeland Regional Health Authority. The key to an exciting and nutritious lunch is to pack a variety of foods from all four food groups in Canada's Food Guide to Healthy Eating.

There are four important food groups to keep in mind when making a healthy and enjoyable lunch - grain products, meat and alternatives, vegetables and fruits, and milk products. It's important to include each food group on the lunch menu. The place to start a quick and nutritious lunch is with a good plan - decide what lunches to make for the week, write them down and keep the list to use later on.

"When you have finished your plan, write out a grocery list. Keep the plan - don't throw it away. After you have done this for a few weeks, you have several plans that can be used over again. Talk about taking the stress out of lunch," says Charlotte. "And remember to involve your kids when making lunch. They are more likely to enjoy their lunch if they have been involved in the planning."

"Next, take your grocery list to the store and get your lunch ingredients. Set up a system and a place for lunch supplies. Now when you go to make your lunch it's easy as 1-2-3. And remember to keep hot food hot and cold food cold."

Tips for a healthy school lunchThe four food groups:

Grain Products - choose whole grain and enriched grain products more often. These include bread and buns (rye, raisin, whole wheat), tortilla, bannock, bagels, muffins, cereals, rice, noodles, pasta, dry cereal and pretzels.

Vegetables and Fruit: choose dark green and orange vegetables and orange fruit more often. Fresh, frozen, canned or dried are all good choices, ready-to-eat carrots, celery, broccoli, cucumber, cauliflower, zucchini, mushrooms, radishes, lettuce, kiwi, plums, grapes, raisins, apples, applesauce, bananas, oranges, pears, melons, cherries, apricots, peaches and berries.

Milk Products: Milk (white, chocolate, strawberry or banana flavor), cheese strings, cubes or chunks (cheddar, Swiss, mozzarella, Brie, cottage, feta, processed), yogurt (plain or mixed with fruit), milk-based puddings or soups.

Meat and Alternatives: choose leaner meats, poultry and fish, as well as dried peas, hummus, nuts (only if there are no allergies to nuts at your school), and seeds (sunflower, pumpkin, sesame), dried meat jerky.

blades on the outside and a series of long metal rods stretching across the building in both directions inside, the building was carefully eased back to plumb and now is "straighter than ever," said Olga Ockerman of the Ferguson Flats Community Association, who has kept a step-by-step photographic diary of the year's progress.

"The project has been one of ingenuity," Mrs. Ockerman said. "It took skills very few people could use" to get the building back in shape.

It also took a substantial amount of funding. What had started out as "a little bit of roof covering and stabilizing" escalated into a full-scale restoration project which "would never have gotten on its feet without the generosity of some of the members", and later help from the oil companies and Alberta Historic Resources Foundation.

Equally important to the project was the time and effort expended on the restoration. "If it was not for the faith some of us had, and the dedication and determination of people like Neil Nelson, Bruno Kummetz and Eddie Hillebrand, all former Fern Chapel students, we could never have done this," Mrs. Ockerman said, adding that interest in the restoration has grown "after people saw that this is not a fly-by-night project."

Mrs. Ockerman pointed out that the three windows on each side and one in the porch were replaced with exact replicas custom-built to match the originals. The porch, removed at one time to use as a concession booth, was skidded back into place and reattached. Drop siding identical to the original was obtained from "a person Neil Nelson knows who still mills it", and cedar shingles were nailed into place on the gables. Only the cedar shingles on the roof remain to be installed over the rubberoid roofing put on the steep roof as a temporary measure, to complete the outside renovations. "It just goes to show what a community can do," she added, noting that Judy Ockerman and Judy's grandson Tyson coated the entire outside with wood preservative.

The project is "way ahead of schedule," Mrs. Ockerman said. "Now we're anxious to get the interior done."

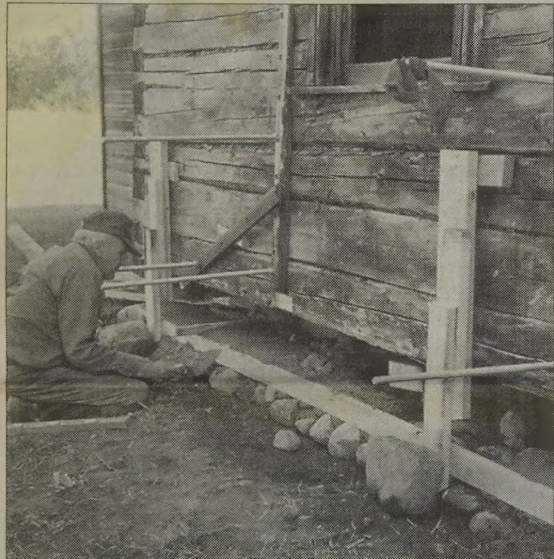

This next step "will depend on our financial resources. Any donations would be welcome, and will be acknowledged."

Many of those working on the project "want to get it finished so we still have time to enjoy it," she added. "We also hope to have it completed by its 90th birthday next year."

Local youngsters will be heading back to school this week, and Mrs. Ockerman wonders, "How would they like to be going back to a little country school like this?" She added that today's students find it hard to visualize learning in a one-room-school environment without libraries and gymnasiums, and with a pair of weathered plank outhouses instead of washrooms, like the schools where their grandparents or great-grandparents learned the traditional "three Rs."

FRIENDS IN HIGH PLACES - Bruno Kummetz and Neil Nelson install cedar shakes on the gables of the newly sided Fern Chapel School. Both men are former students of the school, which served the community's youths from 1913 to 1949.

NEIL NELSON smooths cement over fieldstones in the new foundation. Note the rods and steel bars which were used to realign the building.

Bullying: it's everybody's concern

By Marylu Walters

Alberta Teachers' Association

How do we know when kids are just being kids and when they are being bullies? This is a question parents, teachers, school administrators, community leaders and kids themselves have to ponder in the wake of recent school shootings and suicides of young people where bullying has been fingered as a factor.

And it's not just the victims of bullying who stand to benefit from society's collective dealing with the issue.

"Bullying is one of the most common behaviors that is identified a predictor of criminal behavior later in life," says Brenda Maheu, program manager of the Alberta Teachers' Association's Safe and Caring Schools (SACS) project, a violence-prevention and character-education effort designed to encourage socially responsible and respectful behavior.

Of course, not all bullies go on to become criminals, she is quick to point out. However, a 1993 study found that 60 percent of students identified as bullies in Grades 6 to 9 had a criminal conviction by the age of 24, compared to only 10 percent of those who were neither bullies nor victims.

The effects of bullying on children cut deep and last long, Maheu says. To illustrate, she brings a hammer, some nails and a piece of wood with her when talking to school kids about bullying. "I ask them to think of common derogatory comments and with each comment I hit a nail into the wood." She then asks them how they would make amends. "For every 'I'm sorry' or 'I was just joking', I remove a nail. Invariably one of the students says, 'What about the holes?' Then we talk about the damage that's left in the wood. No matter how many apologies, the damage remains."

Maheu distinguishes between bullying behavior and the normal conflicts that erupt among kids. "Conflict is a natural part of growing up. What differentiates bullying behavior is the uneven power positions of the people involved." Also, bullying behavior — such as teasing, exclusion, threats, derogatory comments, hitting or stealing — is persistent. "If you do these things to someone with less power than you for an extended period of time, that's bullying."

In various studies nearly a quarter of school children say they've been targets of bullying at some time in their lives. About 85 percent witness bullying but usually remain silent.

"If you watch and don't do anything about it, you're still a participant," Maheu says. "In fact, bystanders have the most power, because bullies get their satisfaction from attention. So if bystanders decided bullying behaviors aren't right — aren't cool — and so something about it, that's the most powerful tool."

Bullying is often invisible to adults, Maheu says. That's because children who are bullied are often reluctant to tell adults. "They have the perception that adult intervention would be minimal, ineffective and might even make things worse. They fear retaliation."

The ATA's SACS project has developed resources to help teachers integrate violence-prevention concepts into the curriculum using such topics as "Respecting Diversity and Preventing Prejudice" and "Managing Anger and Dealing with Bullying and Harassment", among others.

SACS also offers a Safe and Caring Community program consisting of workshops for adults who work with children to help them reinforce positive social behavior in the school, at home or in the community.

"We want to get people in the community to think about all of the kids in their lives," Maheu says. "While only about 30 percent of adults have kids in school, the broader community benefits when we address these issues."

Saluting one of our best

I first came in contact with Ray Danyluk when our children were involved in hockey and basketball in our local community of Elk Point. That may or may not have been my first contact with him, but it was in connection with sports that I was first able to observe Ray as he displayed his competitive nature. As Ray has said many times, "I hate to lose." Ray would give it everything he had to make sure this didn't happen. In Basketball, as "the coach", Ray knew when to put his best players in certain positions to make winning possible. He taught strategy and made the kids work. They worked hard and did their best for Ray. They liked him. Now, we all know that Ray's team didn't always win. When that happened, after a few minutes of reflection, Ray would bounce back as he knew there would be another day. The next game would come and the game before was forgotten.

Ray was not only a good basketball coach, he was also a good fundraiser for Minor Hockey games in Elk Point. Many of us will remember Ray selling 50-50 tickets and selling tickets on loonies taped to a hockey stick. His smile and convincing way about him won our hearts, and yes, we purchased those tickets. So when Ray entered politics, we knew he would carry this same personality and attitude of not losing with him. We knew we could count on Ray fighting for what he believed to be "the best".

EASTHOPE
from the FCSS desk

When the Elk Point Interagency Health Committee first heard about the "quiet cuts" to our local Health Centre in the loss of our physiotherapist, a phone call was made to Ray. The IHC also made a presentation to the Lakeland Regional Health Authority Board about the cuts and the lack of communication. Well, a lot of water has run under the bridge since that time. Anyway, I want to share with the community that we picked up a good supporter in the chair of the LRHA Board, Ernie Isley, as well as our local area representative, John Pilipchuk. It is interesting or coincidental, as they say, but did you know that Ernie Isley is a retired school teacher and he also coached sports in school. John Pilipchuk is a retired school teacher and a local area farmer. Ray Danyluk is also a local area farmer/rancher. So when you get right down to it, these three gentlemen all exhibit strong fighting roots. They all believe in fighting for what is best.

It is because of all three of these gentlemen who have been working with the Interagency Health Committee, that we have gone as far as we have in working to save the Elk Point Health Centre, and it is time we recognized them by saying, "thank you, gentlemen. You are our best!"

It is because Ernie Isley came up with the idea of suggesting to the Minister of Health and Wellness that the "funding formula" be reviewed, that it is now being looked at by appointed accountants. Their results and the decision of the Minister as to the whole future of the LRHA budget submission will not be finalized until the middle of September. Meanwhile, both Ray and Ernie have also communicated with our Premier, Ralph Klein. As it is said, Elk Point saint "one of our best" to fight for us. Ray has done that. Thank you, Ray. Others joined in to fight. Thank you, IHC. Thank you, Ernie Isley, and thank you, John Pilipchuk. Whatever the decision in the middle of the month, we know everyone has done their best. Thank you!

Fall graduation for F. G. Miller's Class of 2002

Outstanding academic achievements awarded

Twenty-six of the 30-member Class of 2002 proudly took to the stage of F. G. Miller High School on Friday evening to officially mark the end of their secondary school years. As each capped-and-gowned graduate marched into the gymnasium and was introduced by teachers Colin Bjorkman and Kelly Burke, a member of the teaching staff stepped forward with a lighted candle to light the candle carried by the graduate and to escort him or her to the stage.

Piano music by Eva Gusnowski and a vocal solo, "Faith of the Heart" by Michelle Friesen, was followed by a moving invocation by Rev. Jope Langejans of Elk Point United Church.

Valedictorian Leanne Wilson likened her classmates to gardeners, and said it is "both exciting and terrifying to plant a dream and make it grow. We all have the resources we need to make these dreams grow. Our teachers gave us the ability to cultivate our own ideas, our parents taught us to nurture our dreams, and most important, we ourselves are able to use the skills our parents and teachers have given us. Miss Wilson said she had "learned three things this year: first, with determination, the amazing can be accomplished; second, don't compare your garden with anyone else's - embrace your individuality; and third, have fun, appreciate the good things." She advised her classmates to "take the resources you have now, refine them, use them wisely and grow your garden."

School Council president Donna Slywka congratulated the grads and said that each member of the class "has set a goal, and maintained their focus."

In the future, she told them, "you will rely not only on book knowledge but on your courage and your dedication." Quoting advice from a number of famous individuals ranging from Louis L'Amour to John F. Kennedy, she told the grads in closing, "the world is waiting for you."

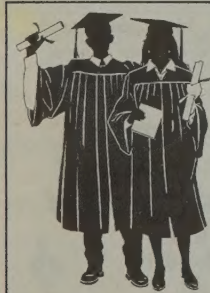

Mayor Lyle Frisby brought congratulations and wishes for success from the Town of Elk Point, and advised, "never let your minds close to learning. It happens every day, whether you know it or not."

St. Paul Regional School Division's Doug Yeo told the class, "you are our future, and we all have our faith in you. Go for it! You only have one chance, one life... don't miss a moment of it."

MLA Ray Danyluk has "a little bit of history with this school," as a former basketball coach and as a school trustee, and is "so proud of the accomplishments this class has made. You're going out into a new world," he advised the grads. "be guided by your heart. The strength of your soul, and the spirit of your friends." Always a bit of a rebel, Danyluk was wearing sandals with his business suit, and confessed that he got a late start, couldn't find his shiny black dress shoes, and wondered "Should I change, and be late, or keep the suit and wear sandals?"

Guest speaker Doug Bassett talked about motivation, and said that up to this point, a lot of the grads' motivation came from their parents. "Now, who's going to motivate you next week? It's going to be up to you." At college, he acknowledged, "there are a lot of pressures, and it's hard to get focused. As a coach, I've had a lot of opportunities to motivate players, but the best ones motivate themselves. It comes from inside."

School board trustee Darrell Younghans quipped that "Ray left big shoes to fill... and he can't even find them." He also confessed to being unable to "fill the 20 minutes they used to allocate for the trustee's speech" when Danyluk was the local trustee. "Congratulations on your outstanding accomplishments," he told the Class of 2002, warning them that "you'll go from sitting here tonight to 40th birthdays and 25th wedding anniversaries in the blink of an eye."

Principal Jim Hawkins told the assembled guests that five years ago, "we started talking about achievement in this school. We started slowly, but two years ago, we zoomed up... this class blew past the last class, and set a new standard, the epitome of the pinnacle of marks for F. G. Miller. Good job!"

Hawkins, Younghans and grad advisor Cheri Lindquist presented awards, pins and key chains to the students. Brandi Becker received the C J Petroleum Achievement Award, Bronwyn Bilak the Elk Point and District Lions Club scholarship, Raelynn Huseby the Bepalko-Sribney scholarship, Carson Mutch the Max and Ila Borowsky scholarship and Leanne Wilson the Capitol Drugs Math and Science award, the School Division medal, the Governor General's medal, the Premier's Citizenship Award and the Kates Memorial Award. Certificates and medals for academic achievement and citizenship were also presented.

Michelle Friesen, singing "I Hope You Dance", and Eva Gusnowski's piano music entertained as the students filed off the stage, receiving gifts from Principal Hawkins, who also turned the tassels on their mortarboards to signify their new status as graduates of F. G. Miller High.

At the banquet which followed, Darlene Sereda offered the toast to the graduates, with the reply coming from Carissa Maksymec. Melvin Easthope toasted the parents, with his father Blaine, a newly retired FGM teacher, giving the reply, and Dean Sereda toasted the teachers, with Randall Kryns replying.

Grads Leanne Wilson and Brian Poitras passed the ceremonial Crusader sword to incoming Grade 12s Kirsty Lindquist and Bradley Young to bring the evening to a close.

GRAD ADVISOR CHERI LINDQUIST escorts candle-bearing JJ Faithful to the stage.

LIONS SCHOLARSHIP WINNER Bronwyn Bilak is congratulated by Lion Doug Bassett.

Co-op members support FGM grads

St. Paul and District Co-op members in the Elk Point area raised a whopping $980 for the F. G. Miller Class of 2002 simply by designating the patronage dividends on their purchases to the class' Co-op number.

Elk Point Co-op manager Dwayne Odgaard said the dividend cheque, which he presented to Class of 2002 representatives earlier in the summer, "could pay a lot of bills... toward the astronomical costs incurred" for graduation celebrations.

Odgaard said the designation of a Co-op number for the St. Paul grad class "earned over $2000 the first year" and this year, it was decided to expand the program to Elk Point. "It's just one more way the Co-op is getting involved in a community they take pride in being a part of. He noted that it is also a way that parents and grandparents of graduates can get involved with the grad class.

This year, the Class of 2003 will have the benefit of receiving patronage allocations for the entire year. If you wish to designate your allocations toward the Class of 2003, their Co-op number is 85000.

Surf's up! Do you know where your children are?

By Marylu Walters
Alberta Teachers' Association

If you're like most parents, you think you have a pretty good idea what your children do on the Internet. And if your kids are like most, chances are you are dead wrong. That's what the Media Awareness Network MNet) discovered when they surveyed Canadian parents and children in 2000. It came as no surprise that 99 percent of Canadian youth said they had used the Internet. The survey asked parents how much they knew about the sites their children visited. Seventy-one percent said they knew a great deal or a fair bit. When children were asked the same question, less than two percent said that their parents knew a great deal, and over 30 percent said that they delete all records showing their Internet activity.

If you think your kids spend most of their time online doing homework, you're dreaming, the survey found. Surfing for fun and entertainment and socializing through e-mail and chat rooms came ahead of homework even though 65 percent of parents thought their kids use the Internet primarily for school work. What's more, 71 percent of youth said they have their own e-mail accounts, while only 38 percent of parents thought their kids had personal e-mail accounts.

"There's a real gap between what parents think their kids are doing on the Internet and what they are actually doing," says Cathy Wing, media education specialist with MNet, a national non-profit organization that hosts one of Canada's largest educational websites on media and Internet literacy. Wing says she thinks parents are aware of the need to monitor their children's use of the Internet more, but "we find that parents are extremely busy. It's difficult to reach them."

The MNet website, www.media-awareness.ca, offers a wealth of information for parents on how to keep kids safe and savvy on the Internet.

MNet has also created a program, Web Awareness Canada, that addresses three key issues: online marketing to kids and privacy, teaching kids to be safe and responsible online, and verification of online information. Alberta Learning has a licensing agreement with MNet that provides access to Web Awareness Canada professional development workshops at no charge to all Alberta K-12 educators, parent council leaders and interested post-secondary faculties of education.

Alberta is "quite far ahead" in addressing the issue of web awareness, Wing says.

The province is a leader in this area, partly because of the high level of Internet access in Alberta schools and the fact that media awareness is incorporated into many new programs including the new K-9 and senior high English Language Arts program, says Gina Vivone-Vernon, director of the Learning and Teaching Resources Branch, Alberta Learning. "Also we recognized that our teachers required professional development and parents needed information."

A network of six Regional Professional Development Consortia work with Alberta Learning and MNet to provide Web Awareness Canada training throughout Alberta for teachers and administrators. Alberta Learning funded 50 workshops in 2000-2001 and the consortia invited one person from each school to the workshops, which were attended by over 800 participants. The department funded more training this year.

The workshops, which have the full endorsement of the Alberta Teachers' Association, also coach teachers on sharing what they learn with parent councils. Alberta Learning has distributed a CD-ROM containing MNet workshop materials to all schools in Alberta.

what's NEWS at the LIBRARY?

The Library goes back to our regular hours today

By Sandy Bullock
Assistant Librarian

Summer is nearing an end and fall is just around the corner. Along with fall come plenty of changes here at the library.

Carlen Mutch, our Summer Reading Program Coordinator, wrapped up her programs last week with success. We want to thank her for the hard work and effort she put into the Summer Reading Program. Good luck at school!

Our hours are changing back to our regular hours on September 3. These hours are:

Monday: 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.
Tuesday: 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.
Wednesday: 1 p.m. - 8 p.m.
Thursday: 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.
Friday: 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Saturday: CLOSED
Sunday: CLOSED

The fall also brings the return of Storytime and the Seniors' Tea! Storytime starts on September 6 at 10:30 a.m., and our first Seniors' Tea is this afternoon at 2 p.m. We hope to see you all again! Sorry to all those who were misinformed about Storytime and Seniors' Tea discontinuing over the summer.

We have plenty of books in the foyer FOR SALE! Check out our discount prices on books for any type of reader. This summer resulted in a little cleaning of the library and we have plenty of books to sell as a result. Make sure you come down and check out our selection.

Just a quick little reminder about interlibrary loans. When you place a hold on a book or books, make sure you select Elk Point Public Library as your pick-up library. That way there is no confusion about where to send your order. Make sure you do not order more than you can read. Renewing interlibrary loans is something that is not always possible. Be sure to check with the staff first.

We have new books arriving often here at the library! Come check out our new selections, ranging from "Franklin Says I Love You" to "Calvin and Hobbes - The Days Are Just Packed" to John Grisham's "A Painted House."

The library is looking for a volunteer, someone who is willing to donate some time to help out the library. With the kids off to school, it's an opportunity to fill up some of the free time you might have. The library is a great place to get some work experience, meet new people, and help our community! Call Daphne at 724-3737 or stop by if you are interested in volunteering.

Start school with a healthy lunch

Lunch tips

■ Get the kids involved in lunch preparation. If they are involved in selecting the type of fruit or special snack in their lunch, they are more likely to eat it.

■ Choose 100 percent fruit juice. Many beverages are not real fruit juice, but instead are water, sugar and artificial flavors.

■ Leftovers such as spaghetti, stew and soup make excellent lunches. Freeze extra portions in individual containers for use in lunches.

■ Prepare sandwiches in advance, wrap and freeze them individually. Avoid freezing sandwiches made with egg, mayonnaise or vegetables.

■ Remember to keep cold foods cold by using insulated lunch bags and containers. Send a frozen juice or yogurt to help keep the contents cold. The items will thaw out slowly in your lunch bag.

■ Try making your own pizza pop without all the fat. Use a sandwich maker, two slices of bread, some pizza sauce, lean ham slices, pineapple chunks and mozzarella cheese. Add some vegetables or fruit to top off the meal.

■ Your children might enjoy a tortilla or pita pocket stuffed with mashed pinto or kidney beans. Round out the meal with orange slices and milk.
